

CRIME in 2003 January Through June

This report compares preliminary crime counts for January through June 2003 with final counts for the same period in 2002 for California law enforcement jurisdictions serving populations of 100,000 or more. The 79 jurisdictions which met this criterion in 2002 and 2003 account for approximately 65 percent of all crimes reported in the state.

Law enforcement jurisdictions are grouped into three categories:

- Police departments (provide law enforcement services to cities).
- Sheriff's departments (provide law enforcement services to unincorporated areas¹ within counties).
- Contract cities (cities that contract for law enforcement services, usually with a sheriff's department, rather than maintain their own police force).

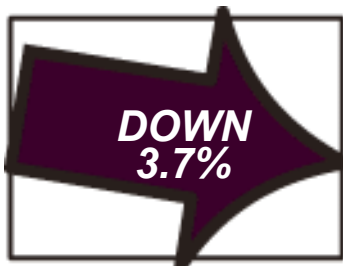

The 2003 crime data used in this report are preliminary and are subject to change. It should also be noted that crime rates are not used in this report but are included in the annual Crime in California publication.

Facts at a Glance

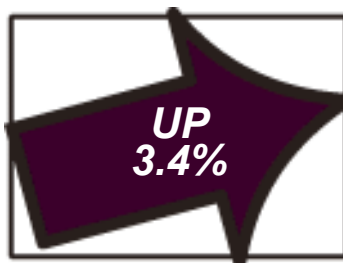

CALIFORNIA CRIME INDEX (CCI) offenses include homicide, forcible rape, robbery, aggravated assault, burglary, and motor vehicle theft.

During the first six months of 2003, the number of reported CCI offenses increased 0.9 percent when compared to the same period in 2002.

The VIOLENT CRIME category includes the offenses of homicide, forcible rape, robbery, and aggravated assault.

During the first six months of 2003, the number of reported violent crimes decreased 3.7 percent when compared to the same period in 2002. The decrease in this category can be attributed to a decrease in each of the violent offense categories for this period.

The PROPERTY CRIME category includes the offenses of burglary and motor vehicle theft.

During the first six months of 2003, the number of reported property crimes increased 3.4 percent when compared to the same period in 2002. The increase in this category was mostly influenced by an increase in the number of reported motor vehicle thefts for this period.

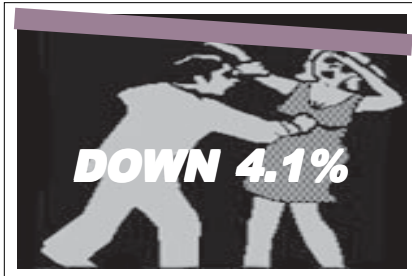

¹An unincorporated area of a county is any area not within a city limit.
